(R) following a hyperlink means Login authentication is required for off-campus access.

Online access to many indexes/abstracts & fulltext e-journals, whether through Sterling online catalog or the Library Website, is restricted by vendor license agreements to connections within the HU Network (HU-Net).

There are two quick ways for authenticated off-campus access to vendor-restricted library databases and e-journals, whether they appear in the Databases list, an HUL webpage, or in Sterling:

1. Access through the Library's Proxy Server

»» Start here & login per instructions

The user name and password you need for authentication are those associated with your ISAS-issued e-mail account.

The Domain Name for faculty, students and staff is howardu

Any problem after successful authentication? Please contact the Library »»» Feedback form, or call 202-806-7252 during library hours.

Any problem with login, such as linking to the Start page above? Please contact Library Systems, 9am-5pm at 806-4096, or email ljoseph@howard.edu

How do I use the Proxy service?

You will need access to the Internet as well as the user name and password associated with your ISAS-issued e-mail account. If you are a current Howard student, faculty or staff member and you don't have such an account, please contact ISAS: Faculty & Staff help, 202-806-2020; Student help, 202-806-0660.

Benefits

- You can access all Web-based library databases and electronic journals just as if you were on campus.
- You do not have to tie up a phone connection if you already have a broadband connection (cable modem or DSL line).
- You can access all Web-based library resources from computers at any off-campus location—home, office, another university, public library, etc.

Disadvantages

- Your cost, if you want to subscribe to a broadband connection (cable modem or DSL line).

2. Dial-up Access through HU-Net

What is HU-Net Account and how do I use it?

- HU-Net is a free service that allows current HU faculty, students and staff members to dial in to a local number (202 area code) and access the Web just as if you were on campus.
- You will need your HU-Net username and password, a computer with a modem, an ordinary phone line, and a browser (such as Internet Explorer, Netscape). If you are a current Howard student, faculty or staff member and you don't have such an account, see instructions, or call:

- Faculty & Staff help, 202-806-2020
- Student help, 202-806-0660

Benefits

- You can access all Web-based library databases and electronic journals just as if you were on campus.

Disadvantages

- Unless you have 2 phone lines, your phone will be busy while online.
- If the 202 area code is long-distance for you, remote access can be very expensive.

For problems regarding configuration of your home computer, login name/password, see Web pages at ISAS, or call:

- Faculty & Staff help, 202-806-2020
- Student help, 202-806-0660

2. VPN Client for Off-Campus Access to Networked Resources (For HU faculty & staff Only)

- You can access all Web-based library databases and electronic journals just as if you were on campus. The Cisco VPN client is required for Howard University staff and faculty using third-party high speed internet to access the Howard University network. VPN installation instructions
